1. The passages below describe galleries of a science museum. Write the letter of the gallery name (A-L) on the line next to the description (1-10). There is one extra name you do not need to use. There is an example (0) at the beginning.

0) This gallery chronologically presents 150 of the most important items from the museum's collections from 1750 to 2000. Find out about the development of the modern industrial world. K

1) This area helps you to analyze the ingredients in what you eat and shows the relationship between a balanced diet and health.

2) Learn about the satellites orbiting Earth. Find out how we are trying to get information about the rest of the Solar System and beyond.

3) This gallery is a must for anyone who wishes to discover the many uses of the electric telegraph, the telephone and radio.

4) From sand-glasses to sundials, water clocks to the wristwatches that we use today, this rich collection of more than 500 timepieces illustrates the skills of their makers.

5) This gallery tells the story of how scientists from the 1700s to the present day have recorded rainfall, temperature, wind speed and sunshine hours. You can find out how rain clouds form and where to find the coldest place on Earth.

6) This gallery takes a close look at the development of those household gadgets and appliances that we use every day. You'll find ancient Roman keys, 18th century kitchenware and a 21st century robotic vacuum cleaner.

7) This gallery deals with current issues, such as the industrialisation of the farm and genetically modified food. You can have a close look at various tools, ploughs and tractors.

8) Explore what keeps us alive. Find out more about physiology, genetics and cell biology.

9) This gallery is an ideal area for early learners, from birth to age eight, who can explore natural history, physical science, and technology through the use of real objects.

10) The steam engines in this gallery range from the earliest type used to the turbines that still generate power today.

Write the letter of the appropriate question (A-L) on the line before the answer (41-50). There is one extra question you do not need to use. There is an example (0) at the beginning.

0) I

We are a diverse nation, so there are differences. We tried to encourage people to celebrate our unity as a nation and be proud of what binds us together as Americans.

41) _____

I think people see it as a mysterious place. It's a place of history. It's hard to even imagine, until you live there, what it's like. That's why my husband and I tried to make it an accessible place for people.

42) _____

I had so many different moments there, moments of great joy and sadness, moments of historic times that I just can't pick one out.

43) _____

Oh, yes. The best one was in 1993. I arrived back at the White House one night and the house was dark. One of the guards said there was no electricity in the house and took me up to the second floor with a candle in his hand. It turned out they had planned a surprise party for me. It was really a great night.

44) _____

They always stressed the importance of education, working hard in school and learning as much as possible. They also encouraged me to believe in myself and not follow the crowd.

45) _____

You know, I can't really remember. I think that I was afraid of natural disasters or nuclear war, or something happening to my family. Usual things kids worry about.

46) _____

Well, when I was growing up, I didn't really know any women who worked, other than my teachers. As I got older, I started to admire a lot of women, because of what they'd done with their lives.

47) _____

I don't know. You'd probably have to ask my daughter. I just tried to do my best and I think that it's such a challenge for any of us who are parents. But no matter how hard you try, you're going to make mistakes.

48) _____

She is very outgoing, and in that way she is very much like her father, who makes friends everywhere he goes.

49) _____

You know, that's very hard, and it's getting harder because there are so many sources of information. Many journalists and reporters, or people with access to the Internet, are ready to put anything out there that will get them attention.

50) _____

I think I would like to know more about the world and what happens. I'd also like to change the number of hours I need for sleep, so I would have more time to work and spend time with people.

- A) As a teenager, what advice did your parents give you that you found most important or helpful?
- B) Have you got any role models?
- C) In what ways is your daughter like you and in what ways is she like her father?
- D) What is the myth about the White House that still lives with people?
- E) Is there anything humorous or funny that happened in the White House?
- F) If you could change something about yourself, what would it be?
- G) When you were a teenager, what was your biggest fear?
- H) How can young people decide what media reports are real and what are just rumours?
- I) As First Lady, you travelled a lot throughout the 50 states. In what ways are American people different?
- J) How can American teenagers get more involved in the nation's history?
- K) What was your most memorable time at the White House?
- L) As a mother, what are your strengths and weaknesses?
